I would like to support Option C because it maintains the current single Ward Councillor.

As someone who has directly sought and received assistance from their Ward Councillor in the past I think a single Councillor facilitates accountability to each resident.

If we have multi councillor wards I believe this direct connection and accountability will be diminished and I can't see how this benefits residents.

Ward councillors receive limited scrutiny with local Government candidates having the least public recognition of any candidate in our three tiers of Government.

This only reinforces the need for direct accountability once a candidate is successful.

Direct accountability leads to the better genuine local representation and understanding of each neighbourhood - in short better government.

Sincerely,

Tania Coltman
